

Job title	Senior China Economist
Job Location	London, UK
Salary range	£50-55k plus performance bonus
Opening date	March 10th 2023
Closing date	April 10 th 2023

Responsibilities

- You will contribute original research to all our China+ publications—the daily Monitor, the monthly Chartbook, the semi-annual Outlook, and ad hoc Datanotes after major data releases and policy events.
- You will be ready to take the lead in writing certain Datanotes and Monitors, after an initial training period.
- You will support the chief China economist by maintaining/upgrading data files, carrying out background research and building indicator and forecast models using spreadsheet, data supply and technical analysis/econometric software.
- You will provide inputs and collaborate with the chief China economist in developing the house views on China, Korea and Japan.
- You will be resourceful in going beyond the information in the English-language financial press and readily accessible official data sources, to find information that provides local colour, and unorthodox data sources.
- You will maintain a slidedeck for client presentations on an ongoing basis, by updating charts, and building new charts as the narrative evolves.
- You will be expected to contribute to the broadening of the China+ service in response to client demand.
- You will need to build relationships with clients around the world, with contact by phone, email, video-conferencing and, potentially, in-person. While travelling, you will need to continue to fulfill your research and writing obligations.
- You will provide high-quality and rapid response answers to client questions on economic topics about the region.
- In due course, you may need to make media appearances on behalf of the company. When discussing economies of countries other than those covered by the China+ service, you will need to be familiar with the views of Pantheon's other economists.
- Once you are suitably experienced, you will provide cover when the chief economist is on holiday or absent for other reasons. This will include responsibility for all publications during that period.

Skills, qualifications and experience required for the role

- Excellent written and spoken English language skills ie CEFR level C1 or above.
- Undergraduate degree in economics or related subject at UK 2:1 or international equivalent
- Real world experience from living, working or studying in northeast Asia, or otherwise able to demonstrate a deep understanding for these countries beyond the economic data.
- Excellent economic and data analysis skills and ability to deploy data in constructing a convincing narrative.
- Deep understanding of the economies of China, Korea and Japan, especially macro dynamics, policy formation and inflation.
- Willingness to stick your neck out by taking a firm view and ability to defend it with suitable evidence, in a concise and clear fashion.
- Ability to work under time pressure
- Resourcefulness when gathering information beyond what is available in the standard English-language financial press and gathering data beyond the readily available series.
- Good understanding of policy formation and implementation features in China, and ability to explain it in clear and simple terms to a non-specialist audience.
- Good presentation skills, including ability to talk through a slideshow, engage with an in person or virtual audience, and to field challenging questions.
- Excellent skills using spreadsheet, data supply software and preferably more technical data software such as R.
- Good understanding of the financial sector (our main client base), including the needs and style of different types of institutions and client teams.
- Ability to take the initiative on new research themes or topics, with guidance from chief economist.
- Time management skills, including juggling various tasks of different levels of priority and urgency.
